UD TO OFFER CONFERENCE ON INCLUSIVE EDUCATION FOR THE DISABLED

DAYTON, Ohio -- The University of Dayton's Center for Ministry with Disabled People and the School of Education will sponsor the Fifth Annual Inclusive Catholic Education Conference from Nov. 11 to 13, at the Bergamo Retreat Center in Dayton.

The conference is designed to help principals, teachers and parents learn how to improve their ability to include children with cognitive, physical and emotional disabilities in the general education program.

The conference will feature presentations by Richard Villa, an adjunct professor at the University of Vermont and St. Michael's College, and the Rev. Ronald Nuzzi, a doctoral candidate in Catholic school leadership at UD. Villa will present strategies for restructuring schools for inclusion and Nuzzi will discuss the theology of inclusion.

The cost of the conference, which includes registration, meals and accommodations, is $230 for single occupancy, $180 for double occupancy and $155 for commuter participants.

For more information or to make reservations, contact Pat Carter at UD's Center for Ministry with Disabled People at (513) 229-4325.
